

MOTHER SAID HE DID IT

After the sudden death of her mother in a car crash, a grieving teenage girl is uprooted and taken to a new neighbourhood by the father she is trying desperately to trust. Isolated, angry, and struggling to settle, she is drawn into an intimate circle of local teenagers who claim they can reach the dead. What begins as a fragile search for comfort soon turns into something far more dangerous when messages from beyond the grave begin accusing her father of murder. As the warnings grow more specific, grief gives way to suspicion, and the safety of home becomes impossible to take for granted. The deeper she is pulled into the circle, the more she begins to question the story she has been told about her mother's death, the motives of the people surrounding her, and whether she is being guided towards the truth or manipulated for reasons she cannot yet see. Set against a world of suburban secrets, emotional vulnerability, and escalating paranoia, Mother Said He Did It is a binge-driven teen paranormal thriller about grief, trust, and the terrifying cost of believing the wrong voice.
